

PIXEL

Art and Technology

This Fringe, Yarra Sculpture Gallery invites artists working a broad range of media to produce new works for PIXEL.

PIXEL illuminates the small, pervasive and overt relationships that artists have with changing technology, which informs the ways in which we communicate, and the ways that artists prepare, create, and display new artworks, in the real and online.

Artmaking in the 21st century connects us via an amalgam of recycled, historic, and evolving technologies and platforms. Locally and worldwide, art reaches out on-screen, via speakers, down alleyways, on beaches, within parks and throughout many purpose-built venues.

The question is, with such tools and devices available at our fingertips, how does technology colour, and filter artistic practice? And how do artists create and twist technology to expand and tilt our visual codes, language and identity?
